

Simon Edwards

SHORT BIO

Simon Edwards is a speaker and writer at OCCA The Oxford Centre for Christian Apologetics. His work focuses on presenting and defending the Christian faith in a way that engages with the big questions of our culture. Previously a lawyer, Simon holds qualifications in Law, Economics, Education and Theology, and is the author of 'The Sanity of Belief: Why Faith Makes Sense' (2021).

FULL BIO

Simon Edwards is a speaker and writer at OCCA The Oxford Centre for Christian Apologetics. His work focusses on addressing the deep questions of our culture with meaningful answers found in the Christian faith. Simon originally hails from Australia, where he worked as a lawyer before moving to the UK to study apologetics at OCCA and theology at Oxford University.

He is the author of 'The Sanity of Belief: Why Faith Makes Sense' (2021), and speaks widely about the evidence for Christian faith – in churches, businesses, government institutions, conferences, and university campuses around the world (including Oxford, Cambridge, Hong Kong, Oslo, and Queensland). In the UK, he has been interviewed for a number of BBC Radio programs, as well as Christian radio stations and podcasts, including "Unbelievable?" on Premier Christian Radio and "Facing the Canon" with J John.

Simon lives in Buckinghamshire, England with his wife, Natasha, and their three young children.

PUBLICATIONS

- The Sanity of Belief: Why Faith Makes Sense
SPCK (2021) | ISBN-10: 0281084890
<https://www.theocca.org/resources/the-sanity-of-belief/>

DIGITAL

- Twitter: @simon_a_edwards
- Website: <https://www.theocca.org/author/simon-edwards/>

FURTHER ENQUIRIES

For any additional information, please contact admin@theocca.org